Lecture at Trinity College

The Archetypal Child

Fri., Sep. 19 Combination Room, Trinity College, 6 Hoskin Ave. 8-10pm

The 'eternal child' in man is an indescribable experience, an incongruity, a handicap, and a divine prerogative; an imponderable that determines the ultimate worth or worthlessness of a personality (CW9i, par. 300). How can we relate to this ineluctable, yet comprehensive, archetype as Jung has portrayed it? The Child comes to us in dreams, art, and everyday life. On a personal level, we can approach it through the images and emotional legacies of childhood. This inner child can fill our days with blame of those who have caused us suffering, or it can initiate a healing process. It can lead us to forgotten gifts waiting to be developed, or point to troublesome limitations in need of integration. Ultimately, the archetypal Child heralds the Self. It charges the individual to bring her or his truest values into life with courage, humility, and imagination. The lecture will be illustrated by a series of dreams.

Fairy Tales and Cultural Influence

Sat., Oct. 4 Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W. 10am-1pm

According to Jungian Psychology fairy tales are archetypal, yet we find fairy tales that while recognizably having similar roots and themes, are expressed quite differently in various cultures. Exemplifying such cultural influence, we will compare "Rapunzel", collected by the Brothers Grimm in 19th century Germany, with its counterpart "Beautiful Angiola", collected in 19th century Sicily.

~~New Beginnings: Two Christmas Stories~~

~~Sun., Oct. 26, Nov. 9 Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W. 10am-1pm~~

~~In this two-part seminar, we will examine two short stories—each with a Christmas theme—along with their respective film adaptations. "The Christmas Wife" by Helen Norris explores a brief encounter between the protagonist and a woman who is ultimately responsible for the enlargement of his personality. She creates a space for him to grow and holds up a mirror to him. Both story and film raise questions about the nature of anima and the relationship between shadow and anima.~~

~~In the second part, we will look at Truman Capote's "A Christmas Memory" told from the point of view of a boy named Buddy. The setting is the Great Depression. When Buddy, who is seven, and his best friend, a sixty-something~~

~~woman, set out to procure their Christmas tree, we accompany them on a journey that is unparalleled and life-changing, particularly for Buddy.~~

A Reading Seminar on Jung's Psychology and Religion

Sat., Nov. 8 Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W. 10am-4pm

In the 1930's Jung's ideas reached an ever-wider audience through public lectures, seminars, and interviews with leading journalists of the day. In October 1937 he presented the Terry Lectures at Yale University. Rather coyly he suggested that a small room be reserved, so that the room would not seem too empty. His hosts knew how popular his three lectures would be, however, and in fact over 2,500 people attended each one. In 1938 Yale University Press published the lectures as Psychology and Religion, and they are still available in paperback from Yale University Press, in the 1938 format. They have also been reprinted in Volume 11 of the Collected Works.

Any of Jung's lectures or seminar proceedings that have been published are exceptionally readable, and so it is with Psychology and Religion. He very clearly presents many of his key ideas on religion, religious experience, numinosity, symbols, and dreams.

Participants are invited please to read the work (quite short!) before coming to the seminar, and also to bring any and all questions and comments arising from their reading to the seminar.

Lecture at 223 St. Clair

Robert Black

Psychology and Ancestry

Fri., Dec. 5 Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W. 7:30-9:30pm

Jung often spoke about, but seldom was able to pursue, the notion of a family layer in the unconscious. This session will present and clarify Jung's insights on the topic and propose applications drawn from analytical practice to the quest for personal insight and conscious support of the process of individuation.

REGISTRATION IN ADVANCE IS ENCOURAGED DUE TO SPACE LIMITATIONS.

Lecture at 223 St. Clair

Roger LaRade

Jung and Roman Catholicism

Fri., Jan. 9 Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W. 7:30-9:30pm

Readers of Jung know of his psychological approach to Roman Catholic topics such as the Trinity and the Mass. They know also of his childhood fear of the Jesuits, the largest Roman Catholic religious order of his time. Jung's dialogue with Catholicism was most profoundly carried out in his relationship with the Dominican Father Victor White. This lecture offers an introductory overview of the main themes of the relationship between Analytical Psychology and Catholicism (and, by extension, religious faith) as they were explored through the correspondence between the two men. Reference is also made to contemporary explorations.

~~The Archetypal Symbolism of Animals~~

~~Sun., Mar. 8, 22, 29~~

~~Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W.~~

~~10am-12:30pm~~

~~Jung believed that animals, far more than humans, live in contact with a "secret" order within nature itself, in close connection with the "absolute knowledge" of the unconscious. Indeed, he believed that animals were the "divine" side of the human psyche. When we meet them in our dreams and in active imagination, animals generally represent this instinctual realm. These three seminars will explore the archetypal symbolism of some domestic and wild animals with special reference to the Barbara Hannah lectures on this theme presented at the C.G Jung Institute between 1954 and 1958.~~

~~Registration occurs on a series- or seminar-by-seminar basis.~~

Mandala Workshop

Fri., Apr. 3

Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W.

7:30-9:30pm

In the first half of the workshop we will look at the history, psychology and art of the mandala, with particular reference to Jung's essay "Concerning Mandala Symbolism," in CW9i. The second half will concentrate on creating one or two mandalas for ourselves, drawing on Susanne Fincher, Creating Mandalas for Insight, Healing and Self-Expression. Art supplies are limited, and participants are invited to bring their own.

The Green Man: an Archetypal Image of Masculine Oneness with Nature

Fri., Apr. 17

Combination Room, Trinity College, 6 Hoskin Ave.

8-10pm

Images of the "foliated face of a man" or a "green man" are found in many places around the world and from different time periods. The Green Man continues to appear in modern peoples' dreams and in modern rituals. This masculine archetypal image of oneness with Nature is intriguing to both men and women. It has been suggested that the Green Man mediates between our imaginative world and the physical world. And that he may be a source of inspiration for our creative endeavours. Tonight's lecture explores the stories, images and meaning of this archetype.

Workshop Beverly Bond Clarkson and Austin Clarkson
Gifts, Giving and Forgiveness

Sun., Apr. 26 Combination Room, Trinity College, 6 Hoskin Ave. 10am-4pm

The Greeks and Romans believed that everyone had a "protective spirit," a daemon or genius, a gift that came to them at birth. They believed in cultivating and sacrificing to this gift so that it could be given to others freely. Our modern western attitude to gifts and giving is quite different. We use gifts to gain power; we have expectations about what will happen to them. Jung points out that "there is a personal claim bound up with every gift." This means that no sacrifice has been made on behalf of the true spirit of giving. Forgiveness, too, often has strings attached. We anticipate certain reactions. We will explore these themes through the use of story, fantasy journey, creative media, a "Giveaway Ceremony," and sharing in the group. Bring a wrapped gift which has held importance for you and which you are now ready to give away. No artistic experience is necessary

Seminar
More Alchemy for Beginners

Helen Brammer-Savlov

Sun., May. 3, 17 Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W. 10am-12:30pm

These two seminars continue our exploration into the world of the alchemical imagination. In doing this, we are following Jung's discovery that alchemical images express in concrete form the experiences of transformation that we undergo on a journey of individuation.

Seminar 1 will introduce the primary symbols of the alchemical procedures and begin a new close study of one of the most beautiful alchemical picture series that exists. First time beginners are welcome to join with others from the 2007 seminar series. Individual colour pictures will be provided for shared study.

In Seminar 2, guided by the seminar leader, participants will continue to develop an interpretation of an alchemical picture series that can provide us with an illustrated "map" of the processes of the living archetypal psyche. The work will include opportunities for informal discussion and group amplification from myth, fairytale and personal experience.

Registration occurs on a series- or seminar-by-seminar basis

The Hole in the Heart: Why We Fail at Love

Fri., May 8 Workman Hall, First Unitarian Church, 175 St. Clair Ave. W. 8-10pm

Why is love so difficult? How do we fail it? For centuries, love has been a topic for philosophy, theology, and especially the arts. During the past century, depth psychology, evolutionary theory and modern science have taken up the topic as well. Yet marriages and partnerships continue to break up, and the divorce rate climbs. We seem to be failing at love. Are we the problem? Modern society? Or is it love itself that is so difficult? Could love be problematic even at an “archetypal level?”

To explore the situation, this lecture will draw upon The Upanishads of the east, Homer’s Hymn to Aphrodite of the ancient Greek world, Vergil’s Aeneid of the Roman west. To bring our view to the present, we will also look at some contemporary film clips. By the end of the discussion, we will have a better appreciation of why love is so difficult, how and why we fail at love, and what those failures could be asking of us.

Tissue Paper Collage Workshop

Sun., May 24

Third Floor, 223 St. Clair Ave. W.

10am-1pm

Drawing on the insights of the late Jungian analyst Edith Wallace, and with the assistance of an experienced presenter of such workshops, Patricia Goss, participants will be invited to create two abstract free-form collages with materials provided. After a break, we will (as a group) share reactions and insights provoked by our creations.

~ Analyst Training Programme ~

The Ontario Association of Jungian Analysts (OAJA) is pleased to have established the only Canadian-based training programme in Jungian analysis, which began in Toronto in September 2000. Upon successful completion of the programme, a Diploma in Analytical Psychology is awarded, certifying that the recipient is deemed capable of working as a Jungian analyst. Membership in OAJA and the International Association for Analytical Psychology (IAAP) is conferred at the same time. For more information, visit our website at www.cgjungontario.com or call the Foundation office at 416-961-9767.
